

Abstract of the Disclosure

Organic polysilica materials containing one or more silicon-containing cross-linking agents having improved modulus and low dielectric constants and methods of preparing such materials are provided. These materials are useful in the manufacture of devices, such as electronic or optoelectronic devices, requiring low dielectric constant materials having good mechanical properties.